In this first volume of the American Communal Societies Series, Wergland compiles ninety-eight accounts recorded by visitors to four Shaker villages: Watervliet, Hancock, Tyringham, and New Lebanon. Elizabeth De Wolfe notes that “Wergland guides the contemporary reader through the phenomenon of ‘visiting the Shakers’ and provides social and historical context for the praise and criticism offered by these numerous and diverse visitors. In her introduction to this collection and in commentary within each chapter, Wergland demonstrates how visitors’ comments about the Shakers both provide information about Shaker life and reflect some of the key social issues and cultural ideals of mainstream society.”
